I want to get the text present in the link clicked while in a fragment. A: If you're using Twitter ICS you can use the ApplicationDelegate to find out which fragment is shown. String userId = Application.getInstance().getCurrentUserId(); Intent intent = new Intent(getActivity(), MyActivity.class); intent.putExtra("userId", userId); You can then look for the intent in your ApplicationDelegate and, if it's there, get the fragment and the String within it you want. DataBase: [Biota groups: Aves, Canidae, Cervidae (1) Birds of islands and archipelagos: A common feature in oceanic islands is that many of these groups occur in lower numbers than elsewhere, which has been explained from their small surface area, their energetic needs, the difficulties in dispersal, and their isolation to other populations. However, this pattern does not match the expected abundance of islands because of their large size and large number of islands, and several studies have confirmed that the abundance of many bird species increases with island size (for example, island birds have fewer species in total than mainland species) and with number of islands (for example, island birds have more species in total than
